Artist Marie Brett is looking to meet older people living in Cork for her Cultural Lore research project. It's all about exploring what local knowledge and folk custom can offer us towards (re)gaining a healthier mind, body, land and home; especially as we age. It's about using natural materials, keeping healthy and accessing the arts.

Marie Brett is an award winning visual artist based in County Cork with artwork held in national and international art collections. Recently she's exhibited at The Irish Museum of Modern Art, collaborated with palliative care and other healthcare staff and been commissioned by an international global justice consortium. She's excited to lead Cultural Lore and keen to meet Cork people to exchange and make, amid shared tea, cake and chat.
